

What is a site inspection?

The intended purpose of a site inspection is to have an independent party verify:

1. The commercial or home office you claim to operate from actually exists and is not an abandoned or make believe location;
2. You are not engaged in any activities or businesses that are not authorized to obtain credit data (a massage service, credit counseling organization, private investigator, tattoo service, bail bondsman, adult entertainment of any kind, credit repair or reseller, news agency, journalist or dating service);
3. Consumer credit files can be stored securely in a locked (room, drawer, filing cabinet, safe, etc);
4. Consumer credit files, if printed, can be securely disposed of when needed (shredder or shredder service, etc).

So what happens?

A licensed inspector approved by the major credit bureaus will visit your office or home (wherever you primarily operate). Don't worry, your files, personal papers and belongings will not be searched. The intended purpose of the inspection is to have an independent party verify that the commercial or home office you claim to operate from actually exists, that you are not engaged in any unauthorized activities or businesses, that you have the ability to password protect your computer (Call Eleanore's site is already password protected so no worries here!) and safely store and dispose of consumer credit data. A few pictures of your location will be taken, just to document the inspection process.

There is no need to feel intimidated; it's usually just a 15 minute visit.

It is also good to know the companies performing these inspections do charge for on-site inspections. Normal site inspection fees range from $65 to $75. Call Eleanore has selected a company by the name of Vision Compliance to perform our site inspections. Vision Compliance has been approved by all three major credit bureaus; they provide friendly, professional service, quick response times and competitive pricing. A $65 fee will be incurred for the inspection cost.

If you have any questions, please contact us and we will be happy to discuss this further.
